StarLeaf Hardware Endpoint Connection Licenses

All StarLeaf hardware endpoints need a valid StarLeaf Hardware Endpoint Connection License ("Connection License") in order to connect to StarLeaf's Cloud global communications network.

Connection Licenses are available for initial periods of one (1), two (2), three (3) years and lifetime.

Connection Licenses are not transferrable between different endpoints (other than for approved RMA units). Connection Licenses may not be transferred between different organizations without prior approval from StarLeaf.

Lifetime Licenses

StarLeaf offers a “lifetime” option for its Connection Licenses (“Lifetime License”). This option is intended to provide peace of mind for customers that their StarLeaf endpoints will remain connected to the StarLeaf Cloud for a minimum period of five (5) years.

Lifetime Licenses provide indefinite connection to the StarLeaf Cloud, subject to the following conditions:

- the license is not transferable to other endpoints (other than to authorized RMA replacement units);
- the license is not transferable to other organizations (unless formally approved in advance by StarLeaf).

The license will be deemed to have lapsed if the associated hardware endpoint is over five (5) years old and ceases making calls for a continuous period of at least four (4) months.

There is no requirement for endpoints that use Lifetime Licenses to hold valid StarLeaf warranties. However, if:

- an endpoint with a Lifetime Connection License ceases to work and it does not have a valid warranty, then it will not be replaced or repaired by StarLeaf, and consequently the Lifetime License will lapse.

Lapsed warranties for endpoints that are less than five (5) years old will be renewed on request, but the renewal will be back-dated to the lapse date, and will be subject to a recertification fee.

Endpoint warranties are only available for the first five (5) years from the date of initial purchase.
